..from a rural village, from a Pakistani village." Translations In 1986, Humayun Saeed, a friend of Zafar's, translated A Night in Lahore (1985) into Hindi and Gujarati. In 1986–1987, Bengali director Satyajit Ray directed and wrote the screenplay for the 1986 Bollywood film Naumi, based on Partition of India and set in Partition of Pakistan in 1947. The film portrayed the life and experience of the author Hamid. Hamid also appeared in the film as the character of a Punjabi migrant laborer working on a railway track in India. The film was based on a short story titled "Bangla Deshwa" (included in his book A Night in Lahore). Hamid's book A Night in Lahore was translated into several other languages including Urdu, French, Italian, Spanish, Polish and English. Awards and honours In 1961 Hamid won Sahitya Akademi Award for his poetry collection Man Charat Dwaipayar. His book Naum: A Social Portrait was awarded the Noma Award by the Government of India in 1991. The same year he received the Pride of Performance Award from the Government of Pakistan. In 1995, Hamid was awarded the Balzac Prize for his novel Naum. In 2007, Hamid was selected as the first recipient of the Lifetime Achievement Award of the Asian American Writers' Workshop, and in 2013 he received the medal of honor from Pakistan. The award-winning American novelist Patricia Highsmith, who had chosen A Night in Lahore as the opening volume of her famous series about two people who met in a train, described Hamid as "the greatest poet in the Urdu language." The Pakistani writer A.H.M. Yusuf Ali once said of Hamid, "I take immense pride in having been one of his close friends, like the president, prime minister, and army chief among others."
